

Bridge Central London Skills Partnership (BCLSP) Digital case study: Mosaic@Soho, Capital City College (CCC)

Mosaic@Soho is CCC's flagship Creative and Digital Media Centre. It embodies a bold vision for modern technical education, where digital innovation, employer engagement, and high-quality facilities converge. It's not just a College centre; it serves as a working studio, a professional launchpad, and a valuable community resource. The BCLSP supported acquiring essential infrastructure, including cloud services to facilitate hybrid learning, specialist Apple hardware, creative peripherals, interactive Promethean displays, and a robust IT and network backbone. These investments have enhanced teaching and learning, enabling new assessment forms, collaboration, and student-led innovation.

The digital and creative curriculum is purposefully collaborative and interdisciplinary across all CCC sites. The impact is evident in learners' everyday experiences: improved access to technology, increased confidence in applying technical skills, and a heightened sense of readiness for the creative industries. It has also allowed the College to explore new progression pathways and respond flexibly to emerging employer needs.

Benefits for learners:

- Learners work in real-world settings, gaining hands-on experience using the same tools and workflows they will encounter in industry
- It is a hub for commercial and community use, as external organisations and creative businesses can book the facilities. This allows learners to engage with real clients and respond to live briefs
- Direct exposure to employer expectations provides learners practical insights into the working world and opportunities to enhance their portfolios with significant industry-facing experiences.

“ The Bridge LSIF Partnership has played a crucial role in ensuring that every learner who enters Mosaic@Soho's doors receives an education and cultivates a genuine connection to the creative and digital sectors they wish to join. ”
